MP Lynne Featherstone visited the Asian Centre in Wood Green to see what services it offers the community.

The MP for Hornsey and Wood Green was given a tour of the centre in Caxton Road and told more about its activities, which range from yoga classes to computer skills lessons.

The classes and talks are either free or heavily subsidised.

Ms Featherstone described the centre as an "invaluable asset to Wood Green".

She said: "I was delighted to visit and see this excellent work first hand. It is vital that these community centres, run by voluntary organisations, are given the support they need to carry on."

"I have now written to my colleagues in government to ask what further funding the centre could benefit from."

Four years for man who stole a laptop

A BURGLAR caught by police before his crime had been reported has been jailed for four years.

Colin James Reid, 34, of Weir Avenue, Upper Edmonton, was found guilty of going equipped for theft and burglary in Boundary Road, Wood Green.

He was sentenced at Wood Green Crown Court last Wednesday. Reid, above, was seen by police carrying a laptop in Westbury Road, Wood Green, on August 24. He ran away but was caught and found to be carrying gloves, a screwdriver and torch.

Within minutes a call came over reporting the theft from a flat in Boundary Road.

Have your say on new "civic heart"

A SPECIAL workshop will take place on Saturday to allow people the chance to see and discuss plans to create a "civic heart" in Tottenham Green.

The council has teamed up with architects Adams & Sutherland to draw up designs for the regeneration of Tottenham Green, with a budget of £1.2million from the Mayor of London.

The improvements will help create a focus for surrounding community buildings including the College of Haringey, Enfield and North East London; the Bernie Grant Arts Centre; Holy Trinity Church; Tottenham Old Town Hall, and Tottenham Green Leisure Centre.

The workshop runs from 11am to 2pm at the Old School House, Holy Trinity Church, in Philip Lane, South Tottenham.

ROGUE LANDLORD HIT WITH SECOND BIG FINE

A ROGUE landlord has been fined £40,000 by a court – less than two months after paying £25,000 in fines and costs.

Mehmet Parlak, director of two Tottenham property companies – Watchstar Ltd and Watchacre Properties Limited – appeared at Tottenham Magistrates' Court at the beginning of January.

He faced charges brought by Haringey Council relating to offences under the HMO Management Regulations relating to four Tottenham properties: 683 High Road; 783 High Road; 105 Pembury Road and 23 Ruskin Road, as well as a failure to apply for HMO licences for two of these.

When visiting the properties, some of which housed young children, council inspectors found various failures including a faulty fire detection system, obstructed means of escape, failure to return gas safety certificate and damaged smoke seals to some fire doors.

The courts were told Parlak may now need to sell a property to pay his fines.

Councillor Nilgun Canver, cabinet member for the environment, said: "It is not right that people should be paying rent to live in sometimes unsafe and unhygienic properties."

"The law stipulates that certain houses in multiple occupation must be licensed, this protects tenants by making sure the property meets certain standards of space and safety. We also expect any let properties to meet certain standards and I hope these fines remind all landlords that we will take action where we find they do not."

Although Mr Parlak pleaded guilty to all charges, the prior conviction records of his two companies, including those in November 2012, resulted in the magistrates imposing fines totalling £40,000 and awarding Haringey Council £4,462.50 in costs.

The council is now looking to reclaim housing benefit payments relating to the unlicensed properties.

Schools shut

By Ruth McKee

SCHOOLCHILDREN across the borough were rejoicing this week as wintry conditions shut more than three-quarters of Enfield's schools.

The unexpected holiday left thousands of pupils free to make snowmen and engage in indiscriminate snow battles.

With deep snow making side roads hazardous and traffic jams slowing cars to a crawl, 73 out of the borough's 94 schools were closed on Monday.

But Enfield Council was keen to stress that this was not a case of health and safety gone mad, with councils dictating that schools should shut in case anyone slipped in the treacherous conditions.

"The council is not responsible for a school's decision to close," a council spokeswoman told the Advertiser. "Headteachers need to let us know in good time if they plan to close. It is ultimately their decision."

"So when it started to snow last Friday, the schools had to make a decision based on the circumstances of the teachers. If they won't have the staff, then they can't open."

The council's website is urging caution as the icy Arctic blast looks set to continue until the end of the week and the Met Office has issued a yellow 'be aware' warning for London and the South East.

Despite the winter wonderland surroundings, the London Fire Brigade has stressed that people should remember the danger of icy lakes and rivers.

Firefighters had to rush to save a man who had fallen through ice covering the lake at Alexandra Palace, in Wood Green, on Sunday night after he had ventured on to the water to rescue his dog.

After saving the man, firefighters ventured back into the frozen waters and retrieved his dog from an island in the middle of the lake.

Family pays tribute to dead couple

THE family of a couple found dead at a home in Cheshunt have paid tribute to them, saying they were "dedicated and loving" parents.

The bodies of Terry Kirby, 72, and his wife Myrna, 57, were discovered by paramedics in Mr Kirby's home in Great Cambridge Road on the evening of Friday January 11.

The couple were understood to have been living separately.

"We are all still trying to come to terms with the shocking and tragic news of what happened," the family said in a statement.

"Our parents always wanted the best for us and were incredibly dedicated and loving."

"We are still trying to comprehend the situation and ask that we can be left alone to grieve in peace at this extremely difficult time."

Hertfordshire police are treating the death of Mrs Kirby, who had been living in Waltham Cross, as murder, and Mr Kirby's death as suicide.

They are not looking for anyone else in connection with the deaths.

Gove heaps praise on primary headteacher

She runs schools better than council – Education Secretary

By Ruth McKee

THE head of a new primary school runs schools better than the council, said Education Secretary Michael Gove during a visit to Edmonton last week.

Mr Gove, who introduced legislation in 2010 allowing groups and individuals to set up schools outside council control, officially opened the multi-million-pound building that houses Woodpecker Hall Free Primary Academy, in Nightingale Road, on Thursday morning.

It is considered a flagship free school by the government and both Mr Gove and Prime Minister David Cameron have lavished praise on executive head teacher Patricia Sowter, notably for her work in raising literacy levels among her students.

Mrs Sowter runs three academies under the Cuckoo Hall Academy Trust banner – Woodpecker Hall, Cuckoo Hall and Kingfisher Hall primaries and another, Heron Hall Academy, is soon to open for secondary school pupils.

Although Woodpecker Hall opened in September 2011, the pupils were sharing the classrooms of sister school Cuckoo Hall Primary Academy, which is next door to the new, state-of-the-art building.

Mr Gove used the official opening to, once again, heap praise on the achievements of Mrs Sowter, who champions raising literacy levels among primary pupils with an intense focus on phonics learning.

"Patricia has a luminous intelligence which means every problem can be solved," Mr Gove told an audience including councillors, board members and trustees.

When asked why it was a better use of money to spend millions setting up a new school outside of local authority control rather than investing in existing council-controlled schools, Mr Gove told the Advertiser: "Because Patricia Sowter runs better schools than Enfield Council."

However, council leader Doug Taylor, who was present at last week's opening, dismissed the implied criticism of local authority-run education.

"I don't think the secretary of state in Westminster is ideally placed to judge the quality of schools in Enfield," said Mr Taylor.

"There is a real danger in allowing the secretary of state to control and direct delivery of education in all the councils throughout the country."

Woodpecker Hall currently caters for 180 pupils, with two nursery classes, two reception classes and two Year 1 classes, with 30 pupils in each class.

Marchers to protest at hospital cuts

DEMONSTRATORS are planning to march through Enfield in protest at the planned closure of A&E and maternity services at Chase Farm Hospital.

The march is being organised by the North East London

Council of Action, a group campaigning against hospital cuts. It is picketing daily outside the hospital, in The Ridgeway, Enfield, with the march due to take place on Saturday February 2.

It is being supported by the Save Chase Farm campaign and the London Fire Brigade Union and will start at 1pm at the war memorial on Chase Green, in Chase Side, Enfield, proceed through Enfield Town centre and end at the hospital.

Health chiefs approved plans earlier this month to remove A&E and maternity services from the hospital in November.

Bill Rogers, NELCA secretary, said: "It is short notice but we had to make a decision quickly.

We need proper A&E provision in this part of London.

"Administrative jobs are also being cut. How can a hospital run without decent administrative support? We have to protect local services."

STAY WARM & WELL THIS WINTER

As the cold snap takes a grip, the need for older people to stay warm and well is paramount.

Haringey Council and Age UK Haringey are reaching out to all older residents in the borough with practical support on staying healthy and keeping warm during the winter weather.

The council has been awarded £153,900 from the government's Warm Homes Healthy People fund to run this year's 'Warm and Well' campaign.

The funding is paying for extra staff to visit 200 older people and agree measures to ensure they can help themselves and each other to maximise their wellbeing in the community. In addition, staff and volunteers are teaming up to contact a further 400 people aged over 60 to offer them a free home energy efficiency check and other home safety interventions.

The action builds on the success of a similar campaign last year which saw more than 400 older Haringey residents gain support on a range of issues from entitlements to grants and benefits to getting active and connecting with others on-line.

Cold homes have a significant impact on older people's health and one of the best ways of staying healthy is to stay warm - many older people are eligible for grants and for additional support.

As well as signposting those that are eligible, the campaign offers a range of support on combating fuel poverty and taking proactive steps to improve health and well being - such as getting connected with new technology to combat isolation, being aware of avoiding injury and illness and staying active and independent.

Information will be available at locations including GPs' surgeries, leisure centres and customer service centres, while libraries and health centres will host pop-up advice sessions.

Cllr Bernice Vanier, Cabinet member for Health and Adult Services, said: "We will be working with our partners in the NHS and voluntary sector to target this extra money where it's needed the most.

"One of our pop up advice sessions has already enabled a number of older people to get their energy bills on line and compare quotes and deals. This kind of skill building has been important for residents to manage their fuel needs over the winter, but also in getting connected and feeling more empowered.

"There are many more people that could access support and advice that haven't yet - either through isolation or through not perceiving themselves to have a critical need. "We hope that anyone reading this will put themselves, or older relatives, friends and neighbours in touch with the services on offer."

For more information on the Warm and Well programme or if you know someone that could benefit, contact Haringey Council on 020 8489 1400 or email IAT@haringey.gov.uk or visit: www.haringey.gov.uk/warmandwell

If you think you are able to volunteer your support for this initiative please contact Age UK Haringey on 020 8801 2444.

New health chief faces campaigners' grilling

By Koos Couvée

CAMPAIGNERS quizzed Enfield health chiefs at a public meeting of the newly created Enfield Clinical Commissioning Group last week.

The governing body of Enfield CCG, which is made up of GPs from 54 of the borough's practices, met at the Dugdale Centre, in London Road, Enfield, last Wednesday. The meeting was attended by more than 25 campaigners.

In what has been described by experts as the most fundamental shake-up of the NHS since its creation, CCGs will take over from primary care trusts in April, but confusion remains around its core responsibilities and processes.

Enfield over 50s Forum chairman Monty Meth asked Enfield CCG chairman Dr Alpesh Patel if the NHS logo would be used in all future publicity, whether or not the CCG constitution would be subject to a public consultation and whether or not the board would publish a full list of providers from whom it intends to commission services.

Dr Patel responded that the NHS logo would indeed be used, because CCGs are statutory NHS organisations, and that Mr Meth's other questions would be answered in writing.

As outlined in the 2012 Health and Social Care Act, CCGs are able to commission services from "any qualified provider", which critics say will allow private firms to offer health services at the expense of NHS providers.

David Flint, from the Enfield Green

Taking questions: Chairman Dr Alpesh Patel and Liz Wise, chief officer of the Enfield Clinical Commissioning Group at last week's meeting

Party, asked the board: "One of the problems residents face when trying to obtain information about public services that are outsourced is that this information is often subject to commercial confidentiality. Will private companies commissioned by the CCG be subject to Freedom of Information legislation?"

Dr Patel responded by asking Mr Flint to submit the question to the governing body in writing.

Before the meeting, Enfield members of 38 Degrees, a national campaign group which aims to limit private provision of healthcare, had submitted a petition to Dr Patel, urging the CCG to adopt a number of its recommendations for its constitution, which will be agreed in March.

Enfield CCG will take responsibility for planning and commissioning health services including hospital care, rehabilitation care, urgent and emergency care, community health services and mental health and disability services.

A newly created national NHS Commissioning Board will be responsible for commissioning services such as primary care, immunisations and health screenings.

Local authorities will continue to be responsible for social care and will extend their responsibilities for promoting public health.

Regeneration to start on estates

By Koos Couvée

A SERIES of estate regeneration projects which Enfield Council says are needed to address the borough's growing affordable housing crisis and provide local jobs are due to get under way this year.

Work is expected to start on six estates, including the Alma in Ponders End, a new estate in Academy Street, Ponders End, Highmead in Edmonton, Ladderswood in New Southgate and New Avenue in Cockfosters.

A number of projects on smaller sites are expected get off the ground in the autumn.

The total cost of the projects is estimated at £450million, with the council contributing £30million.

In September last year, residents living in the 717 properties on the Alma Estate were sent letters confirming which blocks will be demolished first to make way for the ten-year, £100million redevelopment.

A developer is yet to be appointed and construction work on 1,000 homes is expected to start in the summer of 2014.

The most advanced project is on the Ladderswood Estate where more than half of council tenants there have been moved.

The development, expected to start this summer, will see the existing 161 council homes demolished and 517 homes built, 368 of which will be for sale on the private market.

Critics say that council tenants could be worse off after the regeneration.

Laurence Manning, who lives on the Ladderswood Estate, said: "The trouble with this model of estate renewal is that tenancies at housing associations are not as secure as in council housing – people can be evicted more easily and the rents tend to be higher.

"And in my experience only a third of people tend to actually come back to the new estate when building work is completed."

The council says it is exploring a new way of providing council homes at the Academy Street site, using funding from rent receipts, part of which can be retained under new legislation.

Ahmet Oykener, cabinet member for housing, said: "We want to take bold steps, no more patching-up work but long-term renewal projects which will provide affordable housing and local jobs.

"There are certain areas in which the government's affordable model, which allows housing associations to charge up to 80 per cent of market rents, does not work.

"We need to be creative in the face of funding pressures and we are looking at borrowing money so that we can build and manage new council homes."

The council has acknowledged that Enfield needs more affordable housing, with rents rising and a £500-a-week cap on benefits being introduced in April.

The ADVERTISER COMMENT

Hurrah for snow

WITH the news that more than 75 per cent of the borough's schools were forced to close due to snow and ice on Monday, people are ready to slam headteachers for not insisting staffand pupils ski over hill and dale into school.

Of course, snow days create childcare headaches and difficulties when parents have to take last-minute time off work.

But who really can begrudge children a day of sheer fun involving sledges and snowballs? We moan enough about our children being glued to the sofa, more interested in staring at a screen than indulging in a daydream out the window or even, heaven forbid, going outside.

So when our soft, indoor-reared children rush headlong into the outdoors, cheeks flushed with the sheer thrill of something so different to the normal routine, who are we to begrudge them a snow day?

Who wouldn't secretly love to be in their (slightly damp) shoes?

Let's work together

MICHAEL Gove doesn't seem to think much of the council's ability to run schools.

When asked why the government prefers to pour money into free schools rather than spreading the money around all the borough's schools, his instant response was that executive headteacher Patricia Sowter runs schools better than the local authority does.

There is something formidable about an empire of schools run with the same unifying ethos of focusing on literacy and reading – it is to be applauded, encouraged and admired.

But wouldn't it be nice if all the borough's children could benefit from a Zen garden, state-of-the-art computer suite and the focused attention of an army of teaching assistants in the way the children of Woodpecker Primary Academy currently do?

We should welcome Patricia Sowter leading the vanguard of literacy in some of the most deprived areas of the borough, but maybe the government should be asking her to work with local government rather than pitching her in competition against it.

Enlightened governments do apologise for past mistakes

RE: Stella Masters' letter "Government should not have to apologise" (Advertiser, January 9).

The fact is that some enlightened governments have begun to take the view that apologies for past mistakes do not harm anyone and can make a big difference to the victims.

I have met with at least one group of social workers (SWAN – Social Work Action Network) who are appalled at what happened in the past and indeed are supporting us in the MAA campaign.

This is seeking a cross-party parliamentary apology for the fact that young women were often pressured into relinquishing their babies for adoption just because they were not married.

Those who are interested can find on several websites, under the heading "forced adoptions", references to the apologies which have already been given in most states in Australia, where the treatment of unmarried women was much the same as here for many years.

I do not doubt that many people working in mother and baby homes years ago were sincere and also kindly in their approach but many were not.

And kindness did not stop them from colluding with all the social pressures of the time, rather than making sure that these women had a real chance to choose what would be best for them and their babies.

There are many heart-breaking stories which are just beginning to come to light of mothers being harassed, bullied and even sometimes tricked into signing over their children for adoption.

And it is sad that partly because of attitudes which are still prevalent today, many of those women still feel afraid to talk about these things openly now.

No single parents today are given free housing or money ad lib, as Ms Masters alleges, but at least they are not condemned for doing their best to bring up their children with or without a partner.

Finally, I cannot agree that we need less sex education for our young people today, unless we want to deprive them of the chance to grow up with a healthy attitude to their own bodies and to make them more vulnerable to the sexual abuse and exploitation which is sadly still so prevalent in our world today.

CPZ would affect the poorest in our society

IF A controlled parking zone is agreed for Edmonton, then businesses in the consultation area will have to pay £660 annually while residents will have to pay £150.

Homes surrounding Silver Street in Haselbury ward and Upper Edmonton will also have to bear this cost to help fund spending gaps forecast for 2015 by the current Labour administration.

As an Edmonton resident, I consider the prospect of a ten-hour parking restriction seven days a week will have a detrimental effect on the local economy as well as residents here.

Many people are unclear what the rationale is for imposing parking charges on probably the poorest people in our community.

A petition organised by the business community has already attracted 600 signatures. Edmonton residents are being urged to participate in the consultation and register their protests against these measures.

How can penalising the poor with draconian and expensive parking measures be part of a Labour obligation?

The consultation concludes at the end of January and I urge all residents and businesses to register their protest before then.

The consultation covers 60 streets in and around Edmonton Green, covering Montagu Road, Bounces Road, Croyland Road, parts of the Hertford Road, Church Street and side streets and up to Brettenham Road and Fleecfield Road.

Why change a successful police model?

THE Mayor of London's draft Police and Crime Plan is suggesting a fundamental change to how neighbourhood policing is delivered.

The proposed plan reduces the old model of a safer neighbourhood team of one sergeant, two PCs and three PCSOs dedicated to every ward in London.

Each ward will only have a named sergeant who may supervise more than one ward, one dedicated PC and one dedicated PCSO.

This means fewer officers who really know their patch, which has enabled effective work in the past.

While the mayor may claim that boroughs will have more police officers overall, he is altering the successful model of local policing Londoners have had since 2004.

Shocked that hospital managed to run out of medicine

MY grandson was rushed to Chase Farm Hospital by ambulance recently because of fever and shivering and stayed there for 11 hours.

The hospital prescribed him antibiotics but could not dispense this as it did not have any more in stock.

And as the prescription could only be dispensed at the hospital, we could not have got it at the time, which was in the early hours of the morning.

Another ten hours passed before instructions were given to our GP to prescribe on a separate prescription and get this dispensed at a chemist outside the hospital. So, 20 or so hours were gone during which my grandson, a toddler of only 18 months, could not get the medicine he needed fairly urgently in a reasonable time.

How could the hospital have allowed itself to run out of medicines? And it could have made some effort to get some from another hospital.

Let's put Strummer Avenue on the map

Fans want street named after Clash guitarist

By Ruth McKee

LEGENDARY punk rocker and one-time borough resident Joe Strummer has had a square named in his honour in Spain – but could soon be commemorated closer to home.

The move to honour the lead guitarist with punk band The Clash came after a Facebook campaign started by residents of Granada drummed up 2,000 signatures on a petition which was then delivered to the council of the Spanish city.

The guitarist, who died of a heart attack in 2002 aged 50, was a regular visitor to Granada and namechecked the Andalusian city in Spanish Bombs, a track on The Clash's London Calling album.

And a similar popular movement could be on the verge of happening in Enfield after a thread was started on community forum Bowes and Bounds Connected.

It suggested that fans should band together to come up with a way to immortalise his former residence in Palmers Green.

As documented in biography Redemption Song: The Ballad

Of Joe Strummer, by Chris Salewicz, the guitarist and lyricist – then known as John Mellor – lived in a flat in Ash Grove, Palmers Green.

Strummer shared the flat from 1970-71 with fellow students of Central Saint Martins College of Art and Design in London while he was beginning to experiment with the early musical influences that would lead him to the punk movement.

Writing on Bowes and Bounds Connected, borough resident Richard McKeever said: "How about a campaign to get a local version of Granada's Plaza Joe Strummer?"

"Could we get a petition up asking Enfield Council to rename Ash Grove?"

"Strummer Avenue is a far better name than that given to the flat by Joe and co, who dubbed it Vomit Heights."

Mr McKeever acknowledged that a name change might not be possible, but added: "At least a blue plaque, while the scheme still exists, so we can remember one of our local heroes."

Cash mob on fitness trail

Leg up: Kevin Matthew leads the class at the Dugdale Centre

By Ruth McKee

DESPITE freezing temperatures, ice and snow, a band of people determined to support local business descended on a fitness class with a twist on Monday night.

Karen Mercer and her crack team of shock cash mobbers visited the Dugdale Centre, in London Road, Enfield, to take part in a pop-up event organised by Enfield's Fit.

Ms Mercer's "mobs" boosted daytime trade in high streets across the borough at the end of last year when, armed with tenners, a group of determined shoppers launched weekly "raids" on unsuspecting independent shopkeepers.

Now the shop-local campaigner has shifted the focus of her efforts towards health and fitness enterprises. She rounded up her gang and issued them with strict instructions to arrive at the Dugdale dressed in their finest workout wear.

"This is amazing," said Ms Mercer, of the turnout of 12 cash mobbers. "It is supposedly blue Monday, when everyone is depressed."

Cathy Underwood, who was there to support fellow teacher and Enfield's Fit partner Kevin Matthew, was emphatic that supporting local fitness events was as important for the economy as shopping locally.

"The benefits of health are manifold," she said. "Being healthy and exercising makes us more vibrant and more positive."

"Having a healthy population is better for the economy. We think in terms of healthy body, healthy mind, healthy business."

Kevin, who led the cash mobbers through their body combat paces, agreed.

"Imagine if 100 people came through the door of the Dugdale Centre for a fitness class for three nights every week – that would be 1,200 people in the space of a month," he said.

"And it's not just supporting local fitness classes. They can go downstairs, have a cup of coffee and spend money and time in the centre."

Ms Mercer is keeping up the fitness theme this Saturday at a class with the UK Academy of Swimming at Queen Elizabeth's Boys' School, in Queens Road, Barnet, at 2.30pm.

All money splashed out at this session will be donated by the academy – which specialises in dealing with aquaphobia and helping reluctant swimmers – to the Noah's Ark Children's Hospice, in Victors Way, Barnet.

Labour sets its election sights on Enfield North

By Koos Couvée

LABOUR activists will focus on ousting Conservative MP Nick de Bois from his Enfield North seat at the next general election after the constituency was named in the party's top three London battleground seats.

After Hendon and Brent Central, Enfield North is the biggest priority seat for Labour in London.

The constituency has been placed 23rd in a list of 106 seats to be targeted nationally, which Labour hopes will help secure the party a 60-seat majority in the next election.

Of these, 88 are seats Labour lost to the Tories and Liberal Democrats in 2010.

Sadiq Khan, who was appointed as Labour's Shadow Minister for London by leader Ed Miliband last week, said: "Enfield North is one of a dozen parliamentary seats across London identified by Labour as key battlegrounds where we will focus our efforts to win a working majority at the next general election."

"At the same time as making Enfield residents pay more by the introduction of a strivers' tax, David Cameron's government is shamelessly cutting taxes for millionaires by an average of £107,000 a year each."

"The Tories have broken their promises on Chase Farm Hospital, cut police numbers and are now even threatening to close local police stations, risking rising crime and less safe streets."

Mr de Bois was elected MP for Enfield North in 2010 when he defeated Labour's Joan Ryan, who had held the seat from 1997.

Mr de Bois won a 1,692 majority and Labour will require a swing from the Conservatives of just under two per cent.

The MP said: "Enfield North has always been a tightly contested seat and I am sure it will be again in 2015."

"But we don't expect to have an election for over two years and my efforts will remain focused on working hard for people in the constituency and being a strong voice for Enfield in Westminster."

We must have referendum on Europe, urges MP de Bois

ARCH Eurosceptic Nick de Bois has urged the Prime Minister to get tough on Europe.

The MP for Enfield North has repeatedly defied his party leaders on the issue and has maintained that Britain's future within Europe should be decided by a public referendum on whether the country should stay in or get out of the European Union for good.

And on the eve of David Cameron's much-anticipated speech on Britain's future within Europe, Mr de Bois called on the Prime Minister to be tough with the EU.

Speaking to the Advertiser the night before Mr Cameron delivered what some commentators have suggested would be a career-defining moment for the Prime Minister, Mr de Bois said: "I would like to see a firm commitment on an in/out referendum from the Prime Minister."

"I think the Prime Minister has done absolutely the right thing in calling for a renegotiation of our relationship with the European Union."

"Our relationship with Europe has to be less about interference and more about trade."

But the MP stressed: "Whatever the renegotiation is, it must be put to the British public to have an in-or-out choice."

Police station closures will be at the expense of long-term security

ENFIELD Council is committed to serving the whole borough fairly, delivering excellent services and building strong communities.

The news that Southgate and Winchmore Hill police stations are earmarked for closure and Enfield police station's opening times could be reduced will be a surprise to many.

We want to ensure our police officers are able to continue their good work in making the borough a safer place but the Metropolitan Police is being forced to cope with savage cuts, showing that the coalition government puts book-keeping ahead of public safety.

The Conservative Party locally appear silent on this.

The council works extremely closely with the police in a number of ways.

We work hand in hand to tackle gang-related crime and serious youth violence and do an enormous amount of work to keep our communities safe.

Together, we help to identify and catch offenders, rehabilitate criminals and provide activities and facilities to divert vulnerable young people away from crime into more positive activities while providing training and education to help them make a positive contribution to the community in which they live.

Instead of supporting this activity, the government has decided to slash funding to both local government and the police.

I fear that it is making short-term savings for central government at the expense of long-term security for our local communities.

Doug Taylor

Leader of Enfield Council

The government appears to know the price of everything and the value of nothing.

Closing Southgate and Winchmore Hill police stations will create a gaping chasm of police coverage in the west of our borough, exacerbated by the proposed closures of High Barnet and Whetstone stations in Barnet.

I recently chaired a consultation meeting attended by deputy London mayor for policing Stephen Greenhalgh and the Met's Assistant Commissioner Simon Byrne, in which the effect on Enfield of the Met's plans to save £500million over the next three years were unveiled.

This consultation by the Metropolitan Police and Mayor of London's Office for Policing and Crime runs until Wednesday March 6.

If, like me, you want to ensure Enfield is safe, I urge you to take part.

If your pension is less than £142 a week call Age UK on 0800 169 6565 for help getting the cash you might be missing out on.

You can also visit your local Citizens Advice Bureau.

Better to remember Mary Seacole than the snooty Florence Nightingale

BRITAIN is a very depoliticised country. We don't vote. We shrug our shoulders at youth unemployment or the housing crisis. Yet when education is our topic, we relish the chance to introduce political controversy into the classroom.

Take Education Secretary Michael Gove's decision to remove Mary Seacole, the black Crimean War nurse, from the national curriculum.

Conservatives everywhere are chortling over this mighty blow against political correctness, while Guardianistas detect a sinister plan to indoctrinate kids with a racist view of history.

In 1988, when the national curriculum was brought in by Mrs Thatcher's government, most teachers revolted at the whole idea of it.

In those far-off days, we thought our job was to present children with challenges, to help them to question the world and find things out for themselves.

We didn't want to be like Dickens' Mr Gradgrind and spoon-feed our pupils with an officially approved diet of facts.

Overzealous teachers may sometimes have hyped up Mary Seacole as a kind of Florence Nightingale figure. Nightingale too was a subject of media hype and generations of nurses have winced at the "lady with the lamp" image.

Nightingale was a cool, snooty, upper-class person, whose ideas about healthcare administration and whose revolutionary use of medical statistics have had a lasting influence on the way we are looked after in hospital.

Seacole ran a soldiers' cafe – her "hotel" – and dispensed herbal medicine, right on the battlefield itself.

She is a much better example of "Britishness" than Florence Nightingale could ever be, but Nightingale was the one who more or less invented nursing as a scientific profession.

It's not all good news, however, for the Tories and their UKIP mates. Throughout her long life, Nightingale was full of praise for the institution in which she first experienced nursing training. It was at Kaiserswerth, in Germany!

Chance to recall Holocaust victims

Building bridges: Rabbi Emanuel Levy will be speaking at the memorial event

By Koos Cuvée

ENFIELD Council will be hosting an event tomorrow to remember the victims of the Holocaust and subsequent genocides as part of Holocaust Memorial Day.

The event, which is themed Communities Together: Build A Bridge, is being held at the Dugdale Centre, in London Road, Enfield, from 6pm. It will include drama and musical performances by pupils from West Lea School, in Haselbury Road, Edmonton, and Wolfson Hillel Jewish School, in Chase Road, Southgate.

There will also be contributions by speakers including Rabbi Emanuel Levy, of the Palmers Green and Southgate Synagogue, Aaron Dryden, of Enfield Disability Action, and a number of councillors.

Enfield Council leader Doug Taylor said: "Holocaust Memorial Day is a national and international day to help us learn from the past.

"Unfortunately, there are still regimes in the world that are unstable and perpetrate hatred, so we must be ever more vigilant here where we can act to promote goodwill among all our communities."

Last week, Edmonton MP Andy Love joined other MPs in signing the Holocaust Educational Trust's Book of Commitment at the House of Commons, to commemorate the victims of the Holocaust and to send a message against racism and prejudice.

Mr Love said: "Holocaust Memorial Day is an important opportunity to remember those who were murdered during the Second World War, and also those who have died in genocides like Darfur, Rwanda and Cambodia.

"Sadly, prejudice and racism remain scourges of society and I would urge everyone to mark January 27 and join with others in the fight against intolerance."

Holocaust Memorial Day officially takes place on Sunday and thousands of events are being arranged by schools, faith groups and community organisations across the UK.

This year marks 68 years since Soviet troops liberated the death camp at Auschwitz in Poland on January 27 1945.

In November, teenagers from four Enfield schools – Edmonton County, Enfield County, Enfield Grammar and Oasis Academy Hadley – visited Auschwitz, the Nazi Party's most notorious concentration camp, on a trip organised by the Holocaust Educational Trust.

Auschwitz was the largest camp established by the Nazis during World War II. More than a million people – the majority of them Jews – died there between 1940 and 1945.

Could you adopt for Enfield?

You could make a difference to a child...

Every year, there are thousands of children throughout the UK needing a new permanent family. In Enfield we have children from many different backgrounds, cultures and religions and we need new families to reflect this. Children may be placed for adoption as single children or they may need to be placed with their brothers or sisters.

Enfield Adoption Service will ensure families get all the information and support they need both before and after adoption. Adopting is about making a real difference to a child's life.

We understand it's a complex subject and that the decision to adopt is a huge one that can't be taken lightly.

So at all times we aim to be honest, balanced and provide you with a clear picture of what to expect.

Public unveiling: The Constable drawing will be put on display by Enfield Council at the Dugdale Centre from Friday

Constable sketch on display to the public

By Ruth McKee

A RARE drawing by John Constable will be unveiled by Enfield Council later this week.

The pencil sketch of one of Constable's trademark rural scenes was drawn 217 years ago and is thought to have been completed by the artist while he was staying with his uncle Thomas Allen, who lived in the Church Street area of Edmonton.

It is signed by Constable and dated 1796, when the artist's family was known to be in the area, after a letter was unearthed showing that his father had been staying with his uncle at his Church Street home in August of that year.

The council bought the drawing in the 1980s and stored the priceless work of art at Forty Hall, in Forty Hill. It has now decided to unveil the drawing to the public.

It will go on display at the Dugdale Centre, in London Road, Enfield, from Friday to mark the opening of the first permanent exhibition of the borough's history.

"It's incredibly exciting that we are exhibiting this artwork by John Constable and we want to share it with as many people as possible, so it will be going on display in our Enfield Life exhibition," said Bambos Charalambous, cabinet member for culture, pictured.

"I urge residents to come along and see our Enfield Life exhibition – it's the first permanent, local history exhibition in Enfield, and reflects the borough's rich history and tells the story of the people who have lived and worked in Enfield and helped shape the borough."

The exhibition will be on permanent display from Friday and will detail the history of Enfield, Edmonton and Southgate.

Members of learning disabilities groups see their creative talents go on display at Capel Manor

Art exhibition should prove a big draw

By Koos Couvée

AN EXHIBITION of artwork created by people with learning disabilities was opened by Enfield mayor Kate Anolue on Monday.

The reception hall at Capel Manor, in Bullsmoor Lane, Enfield, is currently stacked with more than 50 works made by people from seven Enfield disability day centres.

The artwork was produced for a project called The Big Draw, organised by the Campaign for Drawing, which encourages people to express themselves through drawing and painting.

Robert Sarll, personal employment adviser at Enfield Council's Integrated Learning Disabilities Service (Equals), came up with the idea for the event.

The drawings and paintings, some of which are Hallowe'en, still life or autumn-themed, were produced in October at a series of events organised by the Campaign for Drawing.

Among the groups taking part were

Community Link Edmonton, in Market Square, Edmonton; the Formont Centre, in Waverley Road, Enfield; and the Radiomathon Centre, in Turkey Street, Enfield.

Mr Sarll said: "At Equals we help adults with learning disabilities find paid work – and as part of that we try to build their self-confidence through a variety of projects."

"Even though only two of the day centres could attend on Monday because of the weather, the event was a great success for our centre users. We are grateful to Capel Manor for allowing us to use the space and there will be more opportunities for other groups to attend the exhibition."

Sue Grayson Ford, director of the Campaign for Drawing, an international arts education charity, in Gentlemans Row, Enfield, said: "Art has a universal appeal and we believe everyone can be creative."

"You can see from the work on display that this project gave its participants a real sense of joy and achievement. Now the exhibition allows us to celebrate their hidden creativity."

"I congratulate the council for running such a pioneering project and look forward to seeing more fantastic work this year. I take a personal interest as the campaign is based in Enfield."

The exhibition is free and will be on display until February 15. Opening times are between 10am and 3.30pm.

Capel Manor is closed this Saturday and on February 2 and February 9.

Lucy gets around to dream job working for Beach Boy

A WEB designer with a passion for the sounds of Californian rock and roll has achieved a lifelong dream of working with one of her childhood heroes.

Lucy Hall, from Enfield, has created a website for one of The Beach Boys.

Lucy described her ideal childhood play day as being complete as long as she had "a tape of The Beach Boys playing in the background".

She has been a fervent fan ever since and came into contact with a friend of the band, poet Stephen Kalinich.

She designed a website for his poetry and he was so impressed he recommended her to Carrie Marks, the wife of Beach Boy David Marks, who was keen to set up a website for her husband's solo projects.

After watching an "amazing" 50th anniversary reunion performance at the Royal Albert Hall in London in September, Lucy was invited by David and Carrie to the plush surrounds of the Intercontinental Hotel, in Park Lane, London.

"Having loved The Beach Boys

since I was seven years old, it was a dream come true," Lucy, who runs Lucy's Web Designs and is one of the founders of consultancy group Loving Social Media, told the Advertiser.

"They were lovely. They made me feel so welcome."

The site that Lucy has created can be found at www.davidleemarks.com

Victorian police drama is ripping fun for Matthew

"THE other day, I was somewhere terribly glamorous – Brent Cross, I think it was – and a guy came up to me and said, 'I've blown your cover'."

Since rising to fame in TV drama Spooks, Matthew Macfadyen has become one of the UK's most popular actors. Now he's back on the small screen in BBC drama Ripper Street, which is based in the mean streets of east London in the late 19th century.

The 39-year-old said he jumped at the chance to take part in the police drama after being sent a copy of the script.

"I had a few months of nothing, then a load of scripts all came at once, and this was by far the best," he said. "It's such terrific writing – it just barrelled along."

"I saw the title and thought, 'This has been done before', but it was so fresh, and it had all the qualities, interest and depth of a period drama."

"You have all that richness, and it has a thumping good narrative as well as blood and guts."

This weekend's episode is the fifth in the eight-part series and Norfolk-born Macfadyen says he is unable to pick one stand-out episode.

"They were all brilliant," he said. "Apart from there being a story of the week, which worked really well, there's a narrative that goes over the whole eight episodes, certainly with my character, and without giving too much away, there's an emotive thing about my character's daughter."

"I thought that worked very well, and I liked exploring that, but there's stuff about dockers' strikes, politics, child gangs, and they were just on the verge of great advances in forensics."

"Fingerprinting hadn't come in yet, so they were sort of on the cusp of really moving forward."

So has its success prompted the phone to ring off the hook with other offers of work? Not really, he explains.

"It's a weird thing because you have odd years. If you're busy, people think you're busy and don't bother to ask, which is the weirdest thing about being an actor."

"I had a very busy year in 2010, and in 2011 I thought, 'I'll wait and see what happens', and nothing happened for six months, and you sit there thinking, 'Oh no! That's the end of that then'."

Macfadyen, who is married to fellow Spooks star Keeley Hawes, also has a big screen pedigree, having appeared in Pride And Prejudice, Frost/Nixon and Ridley Scott's Robin Hood.

So how did he find stepping into Colin Firth's shoes as Mr Darcy for Pride And Prejudice in 2005?

"It was good," he said. "You were sort of aware that people were quite proprietorial about it, and that's fine. That's the same as lots of parts. With all those classical parts, you think, 'I'll have a bash', and the adaptation was unique."

Does he even get overwhelmed by the scale of films such as Robin Hood or Pride And Prejudice?

"A little bit," he said. "Now and again you step back and think, 'Wow, they've built a village somewhere in Surrey'."

"Certainly something like Robin Hood, it's like mobilising an army. There are thousands of people and trucks, but the meat and potatoes of it is just moment by moment, often little things such as getting off a horse, but it's all good fun."

As for his favourite role, Macfadyen is unable to pick just one. He added: "I loved playing Logan Mountstuart in Any Human Heart, and I loved the book too."

"I loved working with [theatre company] Cheek By Jowl back in the 1990s when I left college. I loved Spooks. We had a great time and I met my wife then. Nobody knew if it was going to take off and it ended up going on for ten series."

Puppet show a twist on fairytale

AND SAFETY

By Nicola Bartlett

AN innovative show combining puppets and animation is coming to artsdepot next month.

Hans Christian Anderson's tale The Tinderbox has been turned into a stage production by Norwich Puppet Theatre.

The story is about a soldier who finds a magical tinderbox, which he can use to summon three fantastical dogs to do his bidding.

The dogs bring him great wealth but before long he moves to the city and spends all his money.

The soldier's fate hangs in the balance when he tries to use the magical tinderbox to win over a beautiful princess.

The story is unusual as the soldier is not a typical fairytale hero, according to Paul Preston Mills, who operates his puppet.

"He is a fairly amoral character who gets what he wants by being quite ruthless," explained the puppeteer.

"Then he loses everything and then he gains it all again, so it's quite a morally ambiguous story about money and love."

The Tinderbox combines puppetry with performance, animation and a film-style soundtrack and the team behind it worked together to ensure all the elements complemented each other.

The staging and puppets were designed to reflect the different parts of the story and the two locations, moving from the forest to the city and from nature and the fantastical to a built-up, money-driven society.

Production director Jo Hayes said: "We start in the forest where it's very natural and we have natural elements like wood and stone in the set."

"We also used salt, which at was very associated with the witch and her world."

"Then there was the city and the soldier and that was very much about metal and so we incorporated lots of metal objects."

Two performances are taking place at artsdepot, in Tally Ho Corner, North Finchley, on Sunday February 3, starting at noon and 3pm. Tickets cost £7 from 020 8369 5454 or by visiting www.artsdepot.co.uk

Family deli is a real sight for sore eyes – and heads

Restaurant News

Feast
56 Fortis Green Road
Muswell Hill
N10 3HN

FEAST has been curing the hangovers of Muswell Hill for the past 15 years. Every weekend the eatery, in Fortis Green Road, is packed with diners feeling the effects of the night before hoping its all-day breakfasts will restore them.

Eggs are served up in all manner of styles – Benedict, Florentine, poached and scrambled, as part of a very reasonably priced full English breakfast (£7.95).

But Feast, which is run by Roger Ward and his wife Jennifer, offers foodies so much more. Its renowned deli counter stocks a range of continental and British delights – jams and marmalade from Yorkshire, pies from Lancashire and cheeses and meats from across the Channel.

"There has been a restaurant here since 1949 – I took it over about 15 years ago and as far as I can remember there has always been a deli," explained Roger.

Feast is divided into two halves. On one side is the deli counter, which also serves up traditional antipasti, on the other is the cafe, which becomes a bistro in the evenings.

Head chef Nicky Nuhaj is in charge of both kitchens.

"We serve modern European cuisine," said Roger. "In the evening the music comes on, the candles come out, the lights go down."

"Next door is the deli, everything we sell is made here. The boys get in at 5am to start baking ready for when we open at 8am."

"In the deli we sell loads of specialities – things you can't get in Waitrose or Sainsbury's."

"Then the supermarkets come around and look what we are selling and copy us. It's a game we play with them."

As well as Feast, Roger runs a catering business and counts Prince Charles among his clientele. But despite his upmarket customers, the atmosphere at the restaurant is decidedly relaxed.

Eatery of two halves: Feast is divided into a cafe and a deli

"We cater for families," said Roger.

"There are a lot of families here because most of the houses are still big houses that haven't been divided up into flats, so you haven't got that transient population."

"It is open to people with young kids. People can just get whatever, they can come in for coffee – be my guest."

"We do vegan and vegetarian stuff. People come here for a meal before going to the cinema across the road. It's a relaxed place."

in the loop

WELCOME to the latest edition of Families In The Loop. And, as you will have guessed from the front cover, we have jumped on the treadmill – down at the gym and metaphorically – in a bid to shape up.

New year, new you etc.

January is always full of good intentions after overindulging at Christmas and New Year's Eve as we vow to change our lives for the better.

However, it can be easier said than done, and after a few weeks that salad for lunch, Diet Coke at the pub when all your mates are having a pint or a glass of wine, and the thought of heading to the gym seem very unappealing.

Happily we have roped in the experts and got some great ideas about how to spice up your eating plan and exercise regime without falling off the wagon.

We've spoken with Claudine Hillier of Barnet-based Hillcliff Personal Training, who has given us five top tips to keeping your New Year's resolutions.

For anyone put off joining a gym by the high cost and year-long contract, we have found some cut-price alternatives.

And if you are already feeling bored of your exercise regime, we've brought together some of the news exercise crazes that are set to hit the UK in 2013.

Losing weight and getting fit can be easier if you have someone to help and inspire you, so we have turned to sports therapist and personal trainer Amrit Theocharous, who runs New Skinny Me.

She is living proof that the exercise and diet regime works, having dropped four dress sizes in a year.

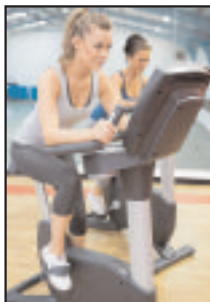

Of course, for many people, looking to change their life isn't just about losing weight or getting fitter – it is also about finding love. But how's the best way to go about it? We examine the pros and cons of internet dating with two experts, and whether it's better to take the plunge another way. And with that in mind, our nimble-footed reporter headed off to an Argentine tango class.

Volunteers have been the lifeblood of society for many years. However, they really came to prominence last summer with the Games Makers, who helped make the London Olympics and Paralympics such a success.

We speak with two long-time volunteers about what inspires them, and tell you how to get involved in your community.

On top of that, we have a couple of great competitions to banish the January blues, as you'll see opposite.

So we hope you enjoy everything we have in store and good luck – we'd love to hear your feedback by emailing families@nlhnews.co.uk

Win tickets to see War Horse

WAR HORSE, now in its fourth year in the West End, is a thrilling and spectacular production based on the celebrated novel by former Children's Laureate Michael Morpurgo.

It tells the story of a young boy whose horse is sold to the army as it embarks for France to fight during World War I.

Fearing for his equine friend, the boy enlists, hoping to be reunited with the foal he raised to be a horse.

The National Theatre's incredible play is brought to life by actors working alongside life-sized puppets by the internationally renowned Handspring Puppet Company.

A runaway success in London and on Broadway, War Horse recently won five Tony Awards including best play and inspired the Oscar-nominated film adaptation, directed by Steven Spielberg.

New crazes to spice up your fitness regime

By Thea Babington-Stitt

LAST year zumba and military-style boot camps were big news – but a whole host of new exercise crazes are set to hit the UK in 2013. Here are just some of them:

Bodyweight training

What is it? Replace the dumb-bells with your body's own weight. Bodyweight exercises are easier on joints and allow for a wider range of movement than traditional weights do.

Benefits: You'll get everything you would from using weighted equipment, but with less risk of injury, leaving you with a strong and toned body. Just look at the lean and muscular upper bodies of gymnasts – bodyweight training is their secret weapon.

Get involved: Bodyweight training can be done anywhere you have enough room to lie down. To get started, ask a trainer at your gym to show you a few techniques.

The Lithe Method

What is it? Combine disciplines together and your body will work in ways it's never done before. Pilates and boxing (Piloxing) has already made its debut, but the new craze from the US is the Lithe Method – a blend of aerobics and strength training exercises created by an ex-cheerleader.

Benefits: Mixing up workouts pushes your body to work all key components. The Lithe Method burns fat and sculpts muscle all over by focusing on a different body part in each session.

Get involved: It has yet to hit our shores, but if its popularity in New York has any-

Shaping up: Clockwise, from above, a class using Gravity Training Systems; TRX can be done at home; bodyweight exercises are easier on limbs thing to do with it, classes should start popping up later in 2013.

HIIT

What is it? HIIT, or high-intensity interval training, involves short bursts of intense exercise with breaks in between. Think circuit training, but with more chances to catch your breath.

Benefits: HIIT burns calories and kicks your body's repair cycle into action, meaning you keep burning fat and calories for 24 hours after the session.

Get involved: Any gym or personal trainer should be able to create a routine for you, but while biking, rope jumping and rowing are all great for HIIT, you don't actually need any equipment – anything that gets your heart rate going works.

TRX suspension

What is it? TRX is an acronym for Total body Resistance eXercise and involves a nylon strap and a metal frame that is used to move your body into different positions for working various muscle groups.

Benefits: With more than 300 different exercises possible – think pull-ups, bicep curls and deltoid raises – you are getting a low-impact workout with plenty of toning.

Get involved: UK gyms are still picking up on this trend, but the TRX system can be purchased for at-home use.

Kranksing

What is it? Imagine a spinning class where the pedalling is done with your arms. Moving your arms for 30 minutes might not sound like an exercise class, but this is a serious workout.

Benefits: Proven to burn as many calories in half an hour as a run at a ten-minute mile pace (270), Kranksing will burn fat and banish those bingo wings.

Get involved: Most UK gyms have a Kranksing machine alongside the treadmills and cross-trainers. Ask for a demo, or for when they have classes – music and company can make exercising easier.

ViPR

What is it? A cylindrical rubber tube that comes in seven weights from 4-20kg, the ViPR has the same functionality as a combination of bar-bells, dumb-bells, kettle-bells, a stability ball and a medicine ball.

Benefits: The ViPR focuses on conditioning the whole body, eradicating the uneven muscle tone that can come from sticking to one exercise. The results include increased flexibility, balance and strength while burning fat and calories.

Get involved: Classes available in nationwide gyms including Fitness First, Virgin Active and David Lloyd.

GRAVITY Training System

What is it? A piece of equipment similar in appearance to a Pilates reformer, which can be set to different incline levels meaning you work against gravity for a tougher workout.

Benefits: A low-impact, intense exercise, you'll wake up aching as your muscles adjust, and strengthen. GRAVITY will tone your core, upper and lower body.

Get involved: Available in gyms and personal training facilities nationwide. Call 01494 769 222 to find your nearest centre.

Five steps to keeping New Year's resolutions

NOW is the time of year when we make our health and fitness resolutions – and for some of us it won't be the first time.

So how do we turn our good intentions into reality and stick by our resolutions for 12 months rather than 12 days?

We have spoken to Claudine Hillier, of Barnet-based Hillcliff Personal Training, and been given five top tips to help you out as temptation starts to bite...

Choose an attainable goal

Your resolutions should be realistic. It's important to make our goals SMART: specific, measurable, achievable, realistic and timed. Your long-term goal may be ambitious but make sure to break it down into manageable parts so you can measure your progress and take pride in reaching each goal along the way.

Make a plan

If you schedule in time to exercise, you're more likely to stick to it. It's an important part of your day so put it in your diary and set aside a specific time for yourself and your health. If you find something scuppers your plans on a particular day, ensure you have an alternative in place. Don't just think: "I'll do it tomorrow".

Enlist the help of a personal trainer

A personal trainer provides the expertise, motivation and accountability to ensure you stick to your exercise goals, and that the route to attaining them is as efficient and productive as possible. Expert knowledge and guidance is a key factor when starting or restarting a fitness regime.

Join a class

The atmosphere in a fitness class is infectious. It can be a great way to meet new people who will provide the accountability to make you go back time and again. Ensure you find something that you enjoy. It's no good sweating away at a step class if you'd much rather be out in the fresh air at a bootcamp.

Reward yourself

If you have stuck with your New Year's resolution for a month, treat yourself to something special. But choose carefully – if you've lost 5lbs don't reward yourself with a cake! Opt for something like a professional massage which will reward you but not pile the pounds back on.

Hillcliff Personal Training provides one-to-one, small group training and bootcamp sessions throughout north London with virtual personal training and nutritional programmes available online. Visit www.hillcliff.com or call 0844 409 7109 for more details.

Shape up without denting your bank balance

EVERYONE starts the new year with the best intentions – give up or cut back on the booze and rich foods and start exercising more.

However, when normal life starts to creep back in some time in February, so does the reality that you will be paying a fortune for that gym contract for which you signed up for a year.

Offering unlimited access for £19.99 a month, Fit4less Enfield boasts on its website that “we’ve cut out unnecessary and overpriced frills such as saunas, swimming pools exercise classes and instead focused on providing a high-quality gym experience”.

The gym in Old Park Avenue is open from 6.30am on weekdays and 8am at the weekends and is also a quick hop from the town centre as well as a few minutes’ walk from Enfield Chase railway station.

It has only been open since January 2 but already has around 400 members, with people coming an average of three or four times a week and some coming twice a day.

That’s according to Amrit Devani, 33, who owns the gym with her husband.

She said: “We have all ages, women and men and people of all levels of fitness coming here to exercise. That’s what good about the Fit4less proposition – it makes exercising more accessible.”

Amrit and her husband were both gym-goers but were put off by the thought of having to pay more than £100 for a monthly couple’s membership, especially when they didn’t use the swimming pool or sauna.

And, having wanted to start their own business, the parents of two young children decided to take the plunge and open their own Fit4less franchise.

The couple chose the location in Old Park Avenue because “there was a need for it. It’s in a tremendous location, right by a railway station, with a high demography of residential properties and businesses, and all the other gyms are on the other side of the town centre so we wouldn’t be treading on other people’s toes”.

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

Hands on: Amrit Devani of Fit4less Enfield shows a customer how to use the AMT

Amrit – who has a background in marketing – already admits that, “for me, it’s what I expect from a gym”.

Fit4less Enfield has a large cardio suite including banks of exercise bikes, cross trainers, rowing machines and treadmills and a separate weights room offering everything from some gentle toning to those pumping serious iron. A separate treatment room offering therapeutic massage and aromatherapy will be opening soon.

Amrit also hopes to start a running club and a walking club as well as offering small group gym floor classes run by the personal training team.

Most importantly, she stresses, there are fully qualified members of staff who are more than happy to help.

Amrit said: “I have been a member of other gyms and on machines which I have not known how to use. And you are often too embarrassed to ask when you are surrounded by serious gym members.”

“But we want to make all parts of our gym available to all members. All our members of staff are qualified to level two and our personal trainers are level three qualified.”

“Their job is to help members. As part of our induction we encourage members to ask about equipment before using it.”

“A lot of people may be wary about using weights, but the kettle bells, for example, are great for working out because you can tone up and burn calories at the same time.”

Amrit added: “We have had great feedback so far. One man who signed up before we opened said that we had ‘exceeded expectations’, which was lovely to hear.”

Fit4less Enfield offers unlimited access for £19.99 a month as well as a one-off joining fee of £25 – although currently has a special offer where that has been cut to £12.50.

For more details, call 020 8432 2030 or visit www.f4l.com/enfield/

Meanwhile, easyGym, in The Mall in Wood Green High Road, offers membership for £17.99 a month.

One of four easyGyms across England – the others are in Birmingham, Cardiff and Slough – the Wood Green fitness centre offers both access to the gym and classes.

As well as their monthly charge, customers pay an extra £4 for each class. Or for £30.99 they get access to the gym and all classes.

Launched by former easyJet supremo Sir Stelios Haji-Ioannou in 2010, easyGym offers a no-frills fitness experience for those looking to shape up.

Alternately, if you don’t want to commit to one gym, or only want to pay for what you use, payasyougym could be the answer.

The online service includes more than 800 luxury gyms nationwide, including ones in Mill Hill, Upper Edmonton, Finchley and Hendon.

Users simply buy a one, 30, 90 or 180-day swim or gym pass, with the discounted pass then sent to their mobile phone as a text message and shown at the gym’s reception.

It's never too late to start volunteering

Long-time volunteers: Sadie Allen, left, and Amlan Goshal, have been giving up their time since 1947 and 1979 respectively

By Koos Couvée

JANUARY is for many people a month of dieting, taking out a gym subscription, giving up smoking, or pursuing more radical new year’s resolutions.

But as January turns to February and the realisation hits that this is really just another year, we seamlessly slip back into our old bad habits.

However, some people may consider 2013 to be year that they get more involved in the community, make new friends and gain new skills – by taking up volunteering.

And while David Cameron’s Big Society idea has been derided for being a flimsy smokescreen for the government’s public sector cuts, there is no doubt that many not-for-profit organisations are crying out for volunteers.

You’re never too old to start, either, as Sadie Allen proves. The 86-year-old, of Edgware Way, Edgware, has been working as a volunteer since 1947.

Besides her role as a steward at the Jewish Museum in Camden, in August 2011 she took up a role at Mill Hill Library, reading with and teaching pre-school children to read on Wednesdays as part of a project called Baby Rhyme Time.

Mrs Allen said: “One day I was watching the news and heard that the government was shutting down libraries. That really upset me.

“Books are windows to the world and it is incredibly important that children get in the habit of learning from reading books at an early age, so I decided to volunteer at the library.

“At Rhyme Time, parents get involved in the reading sessions, and it is great to see when mothers enjoy each other’s company too, as so many mothers feel isolated at home alone with a baby.

“I absolutely love doing it and it is great to have parents recognise me on the street. Together we are cementing a better community.”

Amlan Goshal, 50, an accountant from Hendon, has been volunteering since 1979. He has taken on a role at Community Barnet, in Moxon Street, High Barnet, which helps people find voluntary opportunities in Barnet and beyond.

Mr Goshal said: “The reason I started volunteering is because I care about people, quite simply.

“I started volunteering at the Middlesex Cricket Board and then went on to work at the Hillingdon Community Mediation project, where I helped resolve disputes between neighbours where communication had broken down.”

There are hundreds of volunteering opportunities available across Barnet and Enfield for those who wish to make a contribution to their community, gain additional skills for future employment, meet new people and make new friends.

Alison Moy is chief executive at the Neuroblastoma Children’s Cancer Alliance, a charity which aims to combat childhood cancer and which is based in Sentinel Square, Hendon.

She said: “We never forget that our volunteers are giving us something precious – their time – and in return we hope we’re giving them something equally valuable – new skills and the sense of achievement that comes from being part of a team that makes a difference in so many children’s lives.”

Mr Goshal added: “Volunteering is something you have to want to do – if you want to help people and you care about the community you live in.

“A lot of people are in a very unfortunate position in life and I believe we can all do something about that.”

Anyone interested in volunteering in Barnet should contact Community Barnet on 020 8364 8400 or visit www.communitybarnet.org.uk

For opportunities in Enfield, call the Volunteer Centre Enfield on 020 8373 62490 or visit www.enfieldva.org.uk/vce

CROATIAN CAPITAL PACKED WITH MAGNIFICENT SIGHTS

By Daniel O'Brien

DESPITE boasting a population of nearly 800,000, the Croatian capital Zagreb feels like a major city condensed into an area the size of a small town.

Even a slow meander from the edge of the New to Old Town takes just half an hour and yet said "meanderer" will have barely travelled a few metres before coming across another impressive government building, art gallery, museum or statue of a 12th-century king furiously waving his sword at an imaginary Hungarian.

I was there for the annual Snow Queen Trophy, a slalom race that forms part of the Alpine Ski World Cup and which, as the country's largest sporting event, takes over the city in much the same way as the Olympics and Paralympics gripped London last year.

For four days the city's main square is dominated by a pop-up bar and big screen that brings the action from nearby mountain Sljeme (pronounced Shleemb-ebj-egh) to the city centre.

In between watching young, people skillfully slide down a snowy hill, I spent my time exploring Zagreb with the help of professional tour guide and expert in everything – Ivana – during which time I was also given a crash course on every famous Croatian who has ever lived.

In the Baroque-style New Town we walked past the Regent Esplanade hotel – the go-to rest stop for wealthy travellers on the Orient Express, including Sean Connery's James Bond in From Russia With Love. And while the train has not stopped here since 1939, it is still an impressive building, and grand enough to accommodate some very distinguished and important people.

I stayed at the Westin. On the 15-minute route from the hotel to the Old Town you pass the Art Pavilion, The Modern Gallery, the Croatian Academy of Arts and Sciences, the Gallery of Old Masters and the Archaeological Museum. This city is either Heaven or Hell depending on whether you are a culture vulture or the Philistine I was aged 12.

Zagreb is also littered with sculptures, including the works of world-renowned Croatian sculptor Ivan Mestrovic.

But it was the medieval Old Town that held my two personal highlights, the cathedral – who doesn't love a massive church, even if one of the spires is missing? – and the Museum of Broken Relationships.

Here can be found a collection of mementos sent by one half of now broken couples, along with a sad, funny/depressing/bizarre story explaining the significance of the object.

I was particularly disturbed by the set of papier-mâché breasts, which a dutiful wife regularly once wore for her now ex-husband.

Between sightseeing and eating, I had a skiing tournament to watch at Sljeme's international skiing centre, which looks over Zagreb from the north.

It is a beautiful site, and when not littered with professionals and ski fans is open to the public for skiing as well as rambling. The mountain is coated in snow for around 100 days a year, but can also be covered in artificial snow, enabling it to remain open for four months a year.

Unfortunately for the local fans, Croatia didn't too well, finishing several places behind a 16-year-old girl in the women's competition and an Austrian giant in the men's event.

Ivan Mestrovic, Dr Kovac from ER, Nikola Tesla, Slavoljub Eduard Penkala (inventor of the hot water bottle) – your boys and girls sure took a hell of a beating.

Drop a dress size in a month

By Anne-Marie Sanderson

THERE is a new diet craze sweeping the streets of Enfield and changing the shape of its residents. New Skinny Me, run by personal trainer and sports therapist Amrit Theocharous, is an online healthy lifestyle programme exploring the art of "eating clean".

Amrit, who has been following the diet for more than a year, has dropped four dress sizes (from a 14 to an eight) and says she has never felt better.

And she is now enjoying sharing her expertise with her clients.

"For me, diet is a lifestyle," says Amrit. "So you have got to want to make the lifestyle change for the long term."

"I've always been health conscious but didn't follow any particular type of diet. However, after having my son my body needed something else to push me back in the right direction.

"That's when I took part in a programme as a guinea pig for a colleague at work called The Skinny Bitch Project. I lost 7.3kg (16lbs)."

As a result, New Skinny Me was born. Amrit teaches her clients healthy eating and lifestyle habits alongside a new understanding of food and how it affects each person.

Clients receive weekly email updates detailing nutrition and a simple, 20-minute daily exercise plan.

And the promise on Amrit's website is that you can drop a dress size in a month – as long as you stick to her guidance, as "it's my way or the highway".

The New Skinny Me programme follows a low-carbohydrate eating plan.

Sounds simple, but bread, potatoes and pasta are an integral part of many people's diet, as Amrit has discovered.

"As soon as 'reduce carbs' is mentioned, I see meltdowns, toys thrown out of prams, tears, verbal abuse – you name it, I've seen it," she says.

So, as part of her service, she offers many recipes on her blog, helping clients to maintain the low-carb theme.

Many are based around quinoa, which Amrit admits can be quite bland – until you spice it up.

There is also an informal social once a month for people to ask questions and share their experiences.

For more information, visit newskinny-me.blogspot.co.uk/, call 07764 678 751 or email amrit\_kaurgill@hotmail.com

For anyone wishing to sign up, Amrit is offering a ten per cent discount if you mention this article.

Living proof: Amrit Theocharous, who runs New Skinny Me, has dropped four dress sizes in a year since following the programme

Spice up your life

Masala quinoa:

Fry some cumin seeds and onions in coconut oil, chuck in the quinoa and add the water as you do when you cook it normally. Add a bit of salt, garam masala, chopped ginger and some chopped Kenyan beauties (green chillies), then cook as normal. You can also add frozen peas/sweetcorn when you throw in the quinoa to add a splash of colour.

Tomato and basil quinoa:

Fry a couple of cloves of garlic in coconut oil, chuck in some fresh/tinned tomatoes, season with salt and pepper and cook for five to seven minutes. Take off the heat and add some fresh basil. Stir into your pre-boiled quinoa and serve.

Spicy omelette

Ingredients:

1 teaspoon coconut oil
1 red onion – chopped
1 clove garlic – chopped
Small piece of ginger – grated
3 green chillies – chopped
3 large organic free-range eggs
Salt
Pepper
Masala
Baby spinach
Beetroot – chopped
Sweetcorn
Cherry tomatoes – halved

Mushrooms – chopped
Handful fresh coriander – chopped

Method:

Fry the onions and garlic in the coconut oil until they are soft and golden.
Whisk up the eggs in a separate bowl, stir in all the vegetables, chillies, ginger and coriander.
Pour into the pan with the onions and garlic, cook until it sets, then finish off the cooking under the grill.
Serve with steamed broccoli, green beans, mange tout, asparagus, kale – whichever you prefer.

Chickpea curry

Ingredients:

Coconut oil
3 tins of chickpeas (organic) – washed and drained
1 bulb of garlic – chopped
6 medium onions – chopped
1 teaspoon cumin seeds
1 small stick of cinnamon
2 cloves
2 green cardamom pods
1 1/2 tins of chopped tomatoes
2 teaspoons of organic salt
1 teaspoon turmeric powder
1 teaspoon garam masala

1 teaspoon ground coriander
Medium piece of fresh ginger – chopped
Small handful of fresh green chillies
Bunch of fresh coriander – chopped

Method:

Infuse the cumin seeds, cinnamon, cloves, cardamom pods in the coconut oil.
When you smell the spices, add the garlic and onions and cook until they are soft and brown.
Add the tomatoes and stir in ginger, chillies, salt and turmeric.
Cook this sauce on a medium high heat until the oil starts separating from the tomatoes, stir often.

Add the chickpeas, cook and stir a further ten minutes on medium high heat.
Add boiling water to generously cover the chickpeas.
Bring to the boil and simmer for 20-30 minutes until they are a medium to thick consistency.
Add the garam masala, ground coriander and chopped coriander, stir in and remove from heat.
This dish can be served with quinoa, green vegetables, salad, any meat or fish – it is very versatile.

in the loop

TAKING on board advice from the dating coaches, I decide that broadening my social networks and doing something a little bit challenging might be the ideal way to start the year.

Who cares that I'm not on an epic love quest – after reading countless new year's editions of women's magazines I now know that the only way any 30-something female can properly start the new year is with a new hobby.

And after three months of watching Strictly Come Dancing on a loop, I somehow instinctively know that I am a natural dancer, perhaps even blessed with hidden Argentine tango skills to rival those of current Strictly champion Flavia Cacace.

Donning my best red dress, and only slightly disappointed that I haven't had time to sew all the sequins on to it, I bravely stepped on to the floor at Trent Park Golf Club – and straight into the arms of David Bailey.

He teaches an Argentine tango class for beginners, intermediates and advanced dancers every Tuesday from 8pm at the venue in Bramley Road, Oakwood.

Although I was frankly stunned that I was not an instant success, as I was whirled (falteringly on my part) around the floor vaguely wondering where Len Goodman and his scoring paddles were, I realised that I was so caught up in not falling over that I had completely forgotten to be awkward and embarrassed.

Instead, I was fully enjoying myself.

According to David, the art to tango is all in the centre of gravity, and leaning into your partner apparently makes it easier for the man to lead.

Having managed to overcome the inevitable British awkwardness and

Strictly ballroom: Ruth McKee, in her finest red dress, is whisked around the dance floor by Argentine tango teacher David Bailey giggles that come from pressing your chest into a man while sober and attempting to walk rhythmically backwards in high heels with at least some pretence at grace, I falteringly started to get the hang of some very basic steps.

After an hour and a half I was not quite Flavia Cacace but, largely due to very patient teaching and a very nice class full of men wearing what I could only imagine were steel-toecapped boots considering how little they winced when I stepped on them, I could at least turn around without feeling as if I had just stepped off a fairground ride.

And, even more, the thing that made me want to recommend it to all my friends is that, according to David, most weeks there are more men than women, meaning that unlike a lot of other partner dance classes, girls very rarely have to learn the male part which is very useful as that might prove somewhat awkward due to my 5ft 3in height disadvantage.

Has internet dating killed our ability to interact with others?

By Ruth McKee

THE new year dawns, and along with the dead weight of a traditional hangover comes the gnawing realisation that it's the middle of winter, heating bills are expensive, and rather than investing in yet another new electric blanket, it might be time to find what I like to refer to as a human hot water bottle (HHWB).

Other, less temperature obsessed people might call them partners/lovers/close personal friends, but they all serve roughly the same winter-warming function.

Although I am already the proud owner of an HHWB, more and more of my friends (single and not quite so single) are turning in their droves to the mysterious world of internet dating.

As a result, I have become intrigued with this phenomenon, which, according to a study by German online dating agency Metafake, is worth more than £2million to the UK economy with 138 out of every 1,000 people looking for some kind of online connection.

Being of what I like to call a certain age, I remember when, back in the distant recesses of time, you spotted someone you fancied on the other side of a party/nightclub/bus shelter and, with the aid of copious amounts of alcohol you approached said eye-catching type, fell into a form of ritualistic courtship fuelled jointly by embarrassment and drink and staggered unsteadily off into the future.

But apparently these days, that is just not efficient enough.

These days we need the algorithms used by online matchmaking firms such as Match.com to find love for us.

Rather than risking getting tongue-tied with a stranger in the darkened corner of a nightclub, we trawl sites to find someone who shares our taste in ethnic cuisine and reads the same newspapers as us.

Again, being from the dark ages, I remember exactly when internet dating launched into public consciousness.

I remember my friends and I regularly dismissing internet dating as for creepy men who were "just after one thing".

But then something distinctly strange started to happen. My young pretty, friends, who generally have to fight men and women off with sticks, were choosing to sit at home, answering more intrusive questions than they would at a doctor's surgery, rather than going out in weather-inappropriate clothes and agony-inducing shoes to chat to real-life humans.

Maybe I was missing out? Maybe all this trial and error around meeting someone, doing some old-fashioned talking, working out if you have any chemistry and what not was a waste of my time.

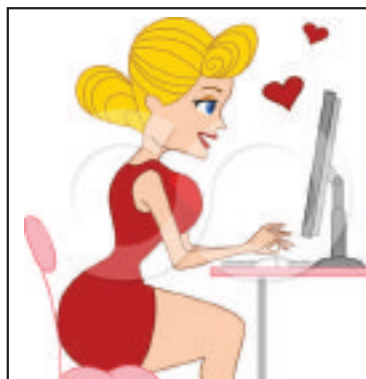

So, I consulted relationships guru and dating coach James Pearce on the art of meeting someone online.

"We are all working longer and longer hours and it's much harder to meet new people," he tells me.

"So, the internet has allowed us to meet thousands of potential matches in minutes from the comfort of our own homes.

"It's great fun if you do it properly. It's not just typing away as tools like Skype have made it easier and cheaper to speak."

Despite James's insistence that it makes sense for us modern and terribly busy types to meet people in the most efficient way possible, I can't help feeling that it somehow takes the romance out of the moment.

How can your eyes meet across a crowded internet chat room? And also, personally, I can't imagine anything more dull than a computer programme pairing me with someone who reads the same books, shares my love of Harry Potter trivia and thinks that the perfect night out involves a musical, a pizza and too much wine – and not always in that order.

Where would the drama be? Where would the screaming arguments be over who gets control of the TV remote?

Would you end up sitting together in companionable silence after only one date, in silent agreement that you had chosen well and let that be an end to it?

Sebastian Callow believes so. Another London-based dating coach, he fundamentally believes that we humans need interaction, but that somewhere along the way, we lost the knack of talking to each other.

"It is not just internet dating – in general people spend too much time on the internet and in front of screens, watching television, staring at Facebook," he says. "It's just another way to avoid going out."

And Sebastian thinks it is not just a recent phenomenon. He tells me: "To some extent it has always been the case. But in the past, when there was no TV or internet, we went to social gatherings like dances.

"But for example now, one guy I know literally spends all day at home playing online video games – he is just rotting."

The dating coach, who gives one-to-one advice and consultancy to men who want to be able to pluck up the courage to actually talk to that beautiful woman who catches their eye on the train home, believes men have a lot to answer for when it comes to the rise of internet dating.

"In some respects men put women up on a pedestal because there is a scarcity mentality – they think if they don't get on with that woman, no one else will ever come along."

So his advice, rather than turning to the refuge of a computer screen, is to get out into the world more, not less.

"If you want to meet people, you need to broaden your social networks, take up hobbies, something you're interested in, something that you would enjoy," he says.

After talking to Sebastian at length about how confidence can be raised by meeting new people in the real world, but diminished by sitting behind a screen, despite my current boringly coupled-up status, I'm inspired to go out, meet new people and, shockingly, maybe even not look at Facebook for an entire 24 hours.

Thinking of selling in 2013? Auctions provide the certainty and speed you require

As the New Year gets underway, Lanes are inviting anyone considering selling in 2013 to contact them and discuss the most appropriate method of sale as the amount of property being sold by auction every year is increasing and this option should certainly be considered.

Lanes are partners with national auctioneers Network Auctions and will be holding six auctions in 2013 from their Central London auction room.

Lanes Network Auctions provide sellers with the perfect combination of local expertise and marketing combined with the presence and experience of national auctioneers who have sold over £100m of property. In 2012 Network Auctions sold over £16.5million of property combined with an impressive sales success rate of 82% with many lots sold on behalf of private sellers who had tried but failed to sell on the open market.

Guy Charrison who is the current President of NAVA, the UK's professional body for auctioneers, is Network Auctions' charismatic auctioneer and so properties are in safe and highly experienced hands.

There are a number of key advantages that an auction offers over the normal sale process by private treaty.

Auctions create certainty because the buyer exchanges contracts immediately and this can apply both pre or post auction as well as on the day itself. In this way, anyone selling potentially gets several "bites at the cherry" in order to secure a sale.

An auction sale is fast, targeting interest from buyers who are in a position to proceed, no chains, finance in place and ready to exchange contracts.

Auctions provide total transparency in the sale process. This can be vital in many situations including probate, matrimonial, receivership, repossession and is, of course, beneficial in all circumstances.

Competition between bidders can produce exceptional results, in 2012 one house was offered via our auction with a reserve price of £325,000 but eventually went on to sell for £420,000!

With access to their Central London auction room and a significant database of investor and other buyers, Lanes Network Auctions can help you secure the sale you require.

Lots are already being taken for inclusion in the first auction of 2013 which will take place on 6th March. To discuss your requirements and the best options for your property, Paul Lincoln of Lanes Network Auctions can be contacted on 0208 8042 253 or by email at paul.lincoln@lanes-sales.co.uk or via their website at www.lanesproperty.co.uk.

Sporty Cayenne turns up the Porsche power

By Matt Joy

WHAT an age we live in. Progress in the automotive world tends to occur in hundreds of steps with only the occasional leap forward – so it's easy to lose sight of just how far things have come.

The Cayenne Diesel S demonstrates this to perfection. The second generation Cayenne was the coming of age for Porsche's SUV, answering critics of the original and earning respect even from those who saw such a car as going against the brand's sporting ethos.

But the Cayenne has never been an ordinary SUV. It has always had proper Porsche genes and the latest model looks sharper and drives even better, making it a practical proposition for people who have to have the Porsche shield on the front.

However, you might wonder if there is a need for another engine option.

For a car that is likely to be bought by just a lucky few, it offers a broad spread of powerplants.

There's the "entry-level" V6 petrol, the V8 petrol in two outputs, the V8 turbos that also come in two outputs, the hybrid petrol and the existing diesel – and there is nothing wrong with the diesel, which offers up 405lb ft of torque and manages 0-62mph in 7.6 seconds, 137mph flat out, and delivers 39.2mpg combined.

Porsche's engineers still seem to think that is not enough and have introduced the Diesel S. Just as with the petrol models, the "S" might as well stand for significant.

Porsche claims that the eight-cylinder twin turbo unit is unique to the segment. Better still are the numbers it produces – with 382bhp it is a whisker behind the V8 petrol and a mammoth 626lb ft of torque is available from just 2,000rpm.

With that much under the bonnet it is no wonder the Cayenne Diesel S blasts to 62mph in 5.7 seconds – 0.2 seconds faster than the V8 petrol Cayenne S – and can hit 156mph.

The familiar Cayenne cabin includes the proper SUV driving position, high with an excellent view, along with a steering wheel with a relatively thin rim, yet there is still a sportscar feel.

The Diesel S sounds a lot more V8 than diesel. An appealing throb comes from the exhaust – blip the throttle and it grows to a proper sporty sound. Select drive on the automatic transmission and the massive wave of torque makes pulling away as easy as could be.

It's such a flexible unit that ordinary driving is effortless, and the adjustable suspension makes the Cayenne Diesel S a thoroughly relaxing and comfortable car to drive.

Big distances can be covered easily with plenty of space for passengers and luggage. The 100-litre fuel tank costs a bit to fill, but allows a theoretical range of more than 700 miles. It takes a particularly dedicated individual to drive that far and not exploit the performance, so tempting is the acceleration on offer.

It behaves just as a Porsche should when approaching a challenging bend. It responds accurately to a driver's demands, with good feedback through the steering, impressive balance and composure.

In many ways this is the most convincing of Porsche's offerings. It delivers a generous slice of driving fun and brings comfort, practicality and even respectable economy into the equation. It's no giveaway, but you would be hard-pressed to find something as capable.

MOTORISTS INVITED TO ALL-NEW FIESTA LAUNCH

Local Motorists will soon be able to catch a glimpse of the much anticipated all-new Ford Fiesta. Ford dealer, Dagenham Motors, is set to host a launch event for Britain's bestselling car on Thursday 24th January.

Since the launch of the previous model in 2008 the Ford Fiesta has proved a major hit with motorists and the brand new model, available now, seems sure to repeat this success. Designed to deliver large car quality in a small car, the new Fiesta has received glowing reviews from the outset.

Alongside a bold new exterior and an interior optimised for ergonomics and comfort, the all new Fiesta features class-leading fuel economy from a choice of six powertrains with CO2 emissions under 100g/km.

The new model also debuts Ford 'MyKey' - a Ford-exclusive technology that allows parents to programme a key for younger drivers that limits their top speed, reduces maximum radio volume and disables the radio until seat belts are fastened. Other class-leading technologies for the vehicle include Active City Stop to help drivers avoid low-speed collisions and voice-activated SYNC with automatic dialling of emergency services.

Speaking of the upcoming 'Fiesta Day', Paul Canning, Regional Director at Dagenham Motors explained: "We are very excited ahead of the launch of the brand new Fiesta and encourage everyone to come along and get behind the wheel of this remarkable new model. And with some fantastic New Year offers available, there truly has never been a better time a buy a new car".

Orders are accepted by the Publishers subject to the Standard Conditions agreed between the Newspaper Society and the Institute of Practitioners in Advertising. Save that:

- Advertisements are accepted on the conditions that (a) descriptions relating to goods are accurate and in no way contravene the provisions of the Trade Descriptions Act 1968, and the Fair Trading Act 1973, and (b) the copy complies with the British Code of Advertising Practice. Advertisements offering credit or hire facilities must conform to the Consumer Credit (Advertisements) Regulations 1980.
- 'Classified' Advertisers offering goods or service of a business, commercial or trade nature will, at the discretion of the Publishers, be deemed 'Trade Advertisers', and as such, must include their names in advertisements. A telephone number is an optional addition to these requirements and not an alternative.
- To comply with the Business Advertisements (Disclosure) Order 1977, Trade Advertisers must make it clear that they are selling goods in the course of business either by content, format, size or place of the advertisement or by including words such as 'trade', 'dealer', 'agent', 'wholesaler', '(T)' etc. in the advertisement.
- The Publishers accept no liability whatsoever for any loss or damage however caused arising out of:
  - (a) Any error, inaccuracy or omission in the printing or publishing of any advertisement;
  - (b) Any failure to publish an advertisement on the day / date or day / dates specified by the advertiser; or
  - (c) Any delay in forwarding or omission to forward replies to box numbers to the Advertiser.
- The Publishers will endeavour to publish advertisements on the day / date or day / dates specified by the Advertiser but insertion days / dates cannot be guaranteed.
- Where shrinkage of advertisement occurs for whatever reasons the advertisement will be charged to the nearest full centimetre. This will NOT apply to the full-page advertisements, which remain full pages even after shrinkage.
- The Publishers reserve the right to reject an advertisement or to vary it in any way they deem fit, at any time before publication, whether or not the advertisement has already been accepted for publication.
- Whilst every effort is made to minimise errors in advertisements, mistakes do sometimes occur. Advertisers or their agents should therefore check their advertisements and inform us of any errors immediately. Responsibility cannot be accepted for more than one incorrect insertion. Typographical or minor changes, which do not affect the value of the advertisement, do not qualify for republication or allowances.
- All gross advertising rates (except classified lineage and semi-display) are subject to and include a 0.1% Advertising Standards Board of Finance surcharge, payable by the advertisers to help finance the self-regulatory control system administered by the Advertising Standards Authority.
- All rates quoted are subject to VAT at the rate currently in force at the time the advertisement appears.
- Should the rate for advertisements be altered the price for remaining insertions shall be revised accordingly or the publishers shall have the right to cancel the unexpired portion of the order.
- The placing of an advertisement order will be deemed an acceptance of these conditions.
- Account facilities are granted at the discretion of the Company.
- All accounts must be settled within the terms agreed by the Company and the Customer.
  - (1) Should an advertiser be in breach of the agreed terms, the publisher shall be entitled to levy a 10% surcharge on the value of the whole debt in respect of accounts with terms of less than 30 days, and any discounts or commissions that had been allowed will be reclaimed.
  - (2) Regular monthly accounts that are in breach of the agreed terms will pay an interest rate of 6% above the current bank of England base rate for each month that the account is overdue and discounts or commissions that had been allowed will be reclaimed. Should Legal action be required the interest will be charged in accordance with the County Court Act 1984.
- Where an advertiser instructs / appoints an advertising agent to act on their behalf, the advertiser will remain jointly and severally liable for payment in respect for an advertisement(s) should the appointed agent fail to pay. For the avoidance of doubt, the agent acts for the advertiser and not for the publisher with the agent being responsible for notifying the advertiser of this liability.
- All queries must be notified, preferably in writing to the accounts department of the publisher within 7 days of the invoice date.
- All digital services are maintained in partnership with the publishers' hosting service providers. Every effort is made to ensure the continuity of these services, but some occasional technical downtime beyond the publishers control may occur. The publisher and its associated companies shall be under no liability if the production and distribution of web services is delayed or prevented by any cause beyond the control of the publisher.
- The Publisher may provide voucher copies for published advertisements in electronic form only subject to certain criteria. Further information is available on request.
- The copyright of advertisements produced wholly or partially by the Publishers belong to the Publishers. Advertisers may not reproduce such advertisements without the Publishers' consent.

DEMPSEY THRILLED BY LATE EQUALISER

By Dominique Stafford

CLINT DEMPSEY admitted that Tottenham Hotspur's 1-1 draw at home to Manchester United felt more like a win after he snatched a last-gasp equaliser on Sunday.

The in-form Robin van Persie gave the Premier League leaders a 25th-minute lead at a snowy White Hart Lane, but Spurs hit back strongly in the second half and created a number of good chances.

However, a mixture of some fine saves from keeper David De Gea and wayward finishing meant that they looked like they would end up with nothing to show for their efforts until – in the third minute of stoppage time – Dempsey turned in Aaron Lennon's cross to seal a point.

"It was a relief," he said. "Anytime you can get a point when you are looking at defeat it almost feels like a win. It was great. We tried so hard to get the equaliser and it just seemed like it wasn't going to be our day.

"We knew getting crosses in was causing them problems, and eventually we got one more cross in, the goalkeeper got a punch to it, the ball went to Aaron and he hit a cross. I just tried to keep it in the frame and I'm delighted it went in.

"We kept on plugging away, kept getting shots in on goal and, in the end, we finally got what we deserved.

The draw extended Tottenham's impressive run to just one defeat in their past 11 league matches and ensured that they consolidated their grip on fourth place in the table.

And head coach Andre Villas-Boas insisted that a point was the very least that his side deserved for their efforts.

"We deserved the draw – we deserved to win, to be fair," he said. "We controlled the game, limited their chances and it was unfair for us to go 1-0 down in the first half.

"Our strategy in the second half was to try and score as early as possible to get the crowd behind us and go for the second goal.

"United did well to hold on so credit to the lads for continuing to persist and continuing to attack, especially when against them you can be punished on the break for all-out attacking. It's hard to recall, maybe it's the first United performance when they've hardly had any possession and only four opportunities.

"We got the point we wanted in a difficult game, and well done to the lads and their spirit to achieve a result like this."

Big blow for Tottenham as Sandro is ruled out for the remainder of the season

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR have suffered a blow with the confirmation that Brazil international Sandro is set to miss the rest of the season with a knee injury.

The 23-year-old, who has established himself as a key figure in the Spurs midfield this season, suffered ligament damage against Queens Park Rangers earlier this month, and the club confirmed that he had undergone surgery and is unlikely to feature before the end of this campaign.

A short statement on Tottenham's official website said: "Following consultation with the knee surgeon, the club can report that Sandro is expected to be sidelined for the rest of the season after surgery on his right knee.

"The Brazil international was forced off during the game against Queens Park Rangers after injuring both his anterior cruciate ligament and lateral meniscus."

Sandro's injury led to Tottenham making a bid to bring in Schalke's German international midfielder Lewis Holtby – who is moving to White Hart Lane when his contract expires in the summer – before the end of the January transfer window, but this was rejected by the Bundesliga outfit.

"Tottenham have made an offer, which was not acceptable, therefore it was rejected," said Schalke manager Horst Heldt. "The transfer window is still open, and Lewis has not become cheaper."

Holtby, who is the current German under-21 captain and has impressed in the Champions League this season, has an English father and has won three full international caps.
